A: "You have to follow the scheme of work to make sure you're fitting in with year 5."

B: "I think that's where a lot of people fall down. They tend to think that they have to teach the QCA schemes of work but if you look at the National Curriculum it's so flexible.... You don't have to do what QCA says, just take the objectives which made a lot of sense to me. But when you get started you desperately want it there. It's very hard when you're new to have the confidence to do what you feel is right."

"Those who focus only on teaching techniques and curriculum standards and who do not also engage teachers in the greater social and moral questions of their time, promote a diminished view of teaching and teacher professionalism that has no place in a sophisticated knowledge society."
