Sustainability Fortnight

This year, all kinds of games, competitions and other events were created and available for the LSBU community to make sustainability interesting and to keep them engaged.

Some of the highlights of Sustainability Fortnight 2017 are as follows

Palm Oil Game

To increase awareness about how palm oil used in everyday products (e.g. an ingredient in food) which directly results in deforestation in many locations around the world, habitat degradation for indigenous groups and displaces orang-utans which reside in these ecosystems.

Clothes Exchange

To increase awareness about how by swapping clothes can significantly reduce clothes being landfilled, the Sustainability Team held an on-going clothes exchange.

This took place each day by the Sustainability Info Desk – an opportunity to talk to staff members and students about the UN Sustainable Development Goals, as well as the events that were taking place during the Fortnight.

Fairtrade Chocolate Truffle Making Workshops

The Sustainability Team held two truffle making workshops, one for staff and one for students.

The primary ingredients were all sourced as Fairtrade and a presentation was made mid-way about the key issues of food-related commodities and the benefit to producers by choosing Fairtrade

Passport

The Sustainability Team created a Sustainability Passport to drive engagement during the Fortnight.

This helped The Sustainability Team to drive traffic to our Facebook page, download and interact with the Elephant App, attend our programme of events etc.

More than 100 students and staff participated in conversations at the Sustainability Info Desk during the programme – quality dialogue about the UN Sustainable Development Goals and what London Southbank University is doing to address sustainability issues.

Ethical Business Forum

The Sustainability Team hosted an evening event to discuss business and ethics issues.

Speakers were invited from The Fairtrade Foundation, a farmer representing a co-operative from Tanzania and Travelife, a sustainability certification scheme for the hotel accommodation industry.

Presentations were made by each speaker followed by a debate. James Whittingham, Sustainability Manager, London South Bank University hosted the event.
