A photograph of a person wearing a light blue t-shirt and dark pants, working on a bicycle in a bike repair station. The person is wearing blue gloves and is focused on the front wheel area. The station is located in a well-lit indoor space with large windows and wooden pillars. Several other bicycles are parked in the background. The text is overlaid on a semi-transparent dark grey box.

We all have a part to play

Southwark is a fascinating neighbourhood, scattered with historical sites and hidden green spaces. This self-guided walk is intended to help you explore these points of interest and should take around 45-50 minutes – perfect to complete it in your lunch hour!

1. Southwark Playhouse
2. Newington Gardens

Southwark's dark history resonates in this park that housed the gaol and gallows for the whole borough in the 18th Century.

For further information on Newington's fascinating criminal background, stop at the exit of the park to find the information board.

3. Trinity Church/Henry Wood Hall

A local church since 1800, this building now functions as a rehearsal hall and concert venue. Famously used by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra.

This beautiful Georgian square has been chosen as a filming location for some fundamental British favourites including Bridget Jones's Diary, Sherlock and Luther.

4. Tabard Gardens

Just one of seventeen open spaces in Southwark awarded a prestigious 'Green Flag' accreditation by the Environment Agency.

Make sure to turn left just before the adventure play park to stay on route!

5. Leathermarket Gardens

Sports a beautiful rose bed in the summer and is a peaceful shortcut away from the busy roads all year round.

The Bermondsey Leather Market was the centre of London's in dustrial leather trade. This whole neighbourhood was dedicated to production so look out for the original signage and architecture of the tannery factories on the buildings around you.

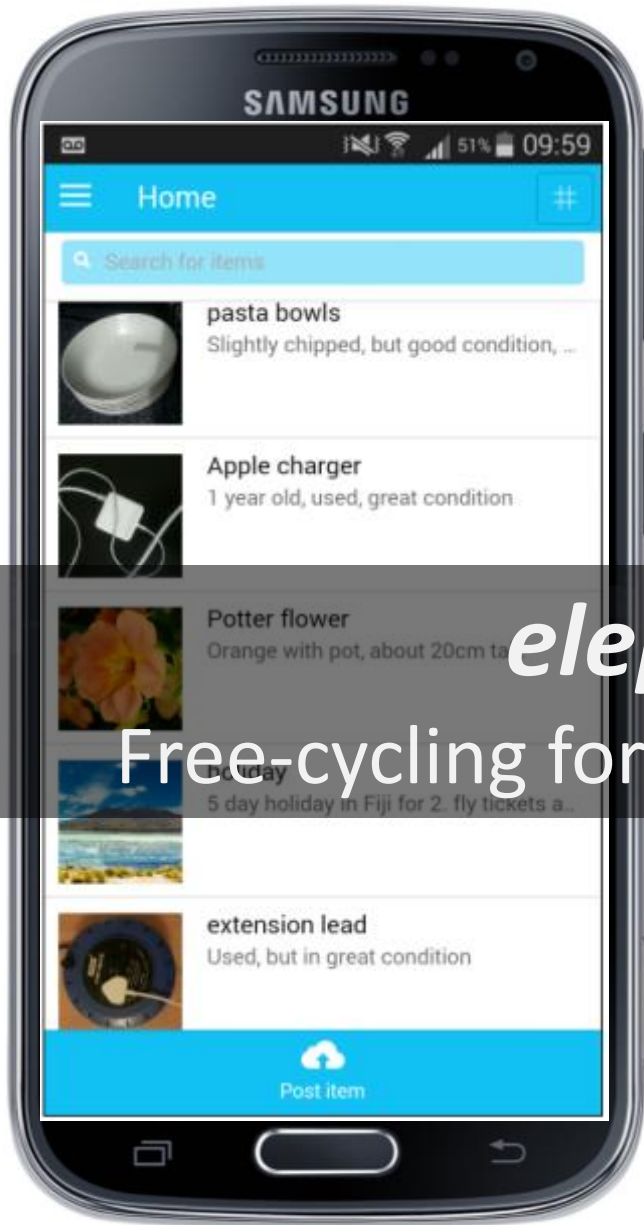

6. Glass Blowing Gallery

A fascinating gallery which allows you to watch the glassblowing process for free and browse the delicate finished products.
