C. Teaching and Learning Strategy

Lectures, seminars, case studies and guest speeches by professionals working in the field will be offered throughout the course. Module leaders will also run online discussion boards using Moodle in order to stimulate critical analysis, thinking and contrasting arguments. Module leaders will make use of on-line educational technologies that provide virtual teaching and assessment environments (e.g. Moodle). Intellectual skills (B1) (B2) and (B5) are developed through individual and group tutorial and seminar work and assignments based on subject theory. The more detailed intellectual skills outlined in (B3) and (B4) are developed and encouraged through tutorial discussion, case studies and coursework projects, including the dissertation. Students are expected, as part of the teaching and learning strategy, to be pro-active participants in the development of intellectual skills through discussion and peer presentation and subject reporting. By using small group work, case studies and seminars, students will be encouraged to apply their knowledge and skills in ways that allow transfer to different settings and contexts. Practical skills are normally developed through case studies and simulations. Students are required to demonstrate and provide evidence of practical skills within the international human resource management field in their academic work and by drawing on examples of specific organisations they may be assigned to investigate in groups.

D. Assessment

The assessment strategy in this course comprises of two elements. Firstly, formative assessment relates to activities that provide feedback to students, enable them to develop their thinking further and reflect on their learning. Formative feedback is a key teaching and learning strategy used throughout the course to ensure students engage in a process of continuous learning. Workshop and seminar activities provide the platform for formative assessment where the tutor can engage students in a variety of activities, such as in-class debates, moots and discussions. Such formative feedback can provide students staff with an understanding of the knowledge gained and areas of syllabus needing further reinforcement and delivery. Peer and staff review on a variety of in-class activities can provide formative feedback to students on the development of their knowledge and skills. Formative assessment will be supported by back up material provided on the University's VLE. Formative assessment will allow staff to reflect on student performance and feed forward into future delivery.

Secondly, formative assessment relates to the testing of subject knowledge and understanding, intellectual skills and practical skills through the application to case study, team working and client handling within workshops and seminars. Summative assessment is delivered through a variety of individual and group methods. Individual methods include essays, report writing and literature reviews, oral presentations and reflective writing. Group methods include group consultancy projects, group presentations, and group simulations. The course overall utilises a mixture of individual and group assessment methods. The Capstone Project is flexible in form and enables students to carry out a consultancy project within a business, explore the possibility of new venture creation or produce a 'standard' Capstone Project investigating and finding evidence-based solutions to business challenges. Exams are not utilised in the course since there is no professional body requirement for these and student feedback has indicated that coursework is preferred at a postgraduate level. Each module has one coursework component and the team will map out all deadlines in order to ensure that students have adequate time to prepare for each assessment and effectively manage the overall course workload.

E. Academic Regulations

The University's Academic Regulations apply for this course.

The course permits one compensated pass, but this excludes the two research methods modules (Curiosity, Creativity and Research; Research in Action). These two research methods modules is a prerequisite for students to proceed to the Capstone Business Project (dissertation).

F. Entry Requirements

(i) BA/BSc (Hons) 2:2 (or overseas equivalent) in Business Studies or Social Sciences. For overseas qualification, the NARIC framework is used as reference to determine equivalence.

Applicants with other degrees may be considered for admissions if it is deemed that elements of qualifications or experience could enable them to benefit from the course. Additionally, applicants whose first language is not English will need to have passed the IELTS with a minimum of 6.5.

G. Course structure(s)

Course overview

- There are 3 modules to be covered in semester 1 and 5 modules and 2 optional modules (or an internship in place of the 2 optional modules) in semester 2.
- The dissertation/capstone business project module commences in June with a submission date of end September.

Placements information

There is no placement on this course. However, all students have the option to study for a 20 credit Internship (instead of taking two 10 credit optional modules). This module allows the students to gain valuable work experience while studying for a Master's degree. Responsibility for securing the work placement lies with the student. However, the student is supported during the search process and when the student is working. The work placement should have some direct bearing on what the student is studying - a student studying MSc International Human Resource Management would be expected to secure an internship with some connection with aspects of HRM within the business community.

Appendix A: Curriculum Map

This map provides a design aid to help course teams identify where course outcomes are being developed, taught and assessed within the course. It also provides a checklist for quality assurance purposes and may be used in validation, accreditation and external examining processes. Making the learning outcomes explicit will also help students to monitor their own learning and development as the course progresses.

Appendix B: Personal Development Planning

Personal development planning is a framework which provides the student with the opportunity to identify untapped abilities and thus provide the opportunity to construct a plan that will focus on their specific skill sets and strengths. It is thus a way of bringing out the student's distinct characteristics and strength and develops same to excel in their chosen area of interest. Students are therefore encouraged to reflect on their progress and to think about areas for development and improvement.

The PDP is designed into the modules of the course by means of how the modules are structured and assessed. Additionally, the course supports PDP opportunities as follows:

- 1) Modules, workshops and resources (through the LRC) to support skills development.
- 2) Opportunity to meet with your seminar tutor to discuss your progress and development.
- 3) Case study and group assignments to support employment-based activities and development.
- 4) Simulations and presentation sessions.
- 5) Reflective statement from dissertation report.

Many PDP activities also involve close collaborations with the library, learning development and career development service.

Approach to PDP	Level 7
1 Supporting the development and recognition of skills through a personal tutoring system.	Students will be allocated personal tutors who will monitor their development throughout the course, with sign posting to additional support as needed. Personal tutors will support students with any challenges they may face during their journey with LSBU.
2 Supporting the development and recognition of skills in academic modules.	The course Induction lays the foundation for skills development that operates throughout the course. Skills development is evident through the course's specialist IHRM modules which target soft skills development, such as problem solving, presentation and team work, coupled with academic knowledge. Skills relating to more general business acumen is developed through the 'Creativity Enterprise and Innovation' module and the common option modules shared across other postgraduate courses. Support is provided through the residential and extra curricula activities running alongside core academic provision.
3 Supporting the development and recognition of skills through purpose designed modules.	The course has a clear focus on developing research, enterprise and consultancy skills. Skills development in the acquisition, storage, and analysis of information in all its forms is developed in a number of modules, as for example in "Curiosity, Creativity and Research", "Research in Action" and the "Capstone Business Project". Enterprise and creativity skills are developed through the 'Creativity Enterprise and Innovation' module while consultancy skills are developed through the 'Management Consultancy in a Global Environment' module.

4 Supporting the development and recognition of skills through research projects and dissertation work.	The study of research methods and the completion of the Capstone Business Project are central to the award of the master's qualification. This will involve students in all aspects of the design and specification of research projects, including methodological choices, data collection and analysis and issues relating to personal and business ethics. Presentation and communication skills are also developed and tested through the research methods modules and the Capstone Project and support for the development of these skills is provided during the residential.
5 Supporting the development and recognition of career management skills.	The course is designed to allow students to bring their own prior experiences into discussion. The use of guest lectures and real case studies will emphasise the practical skills that underpin effective decision-making. The course develops team-working skills and encourages personal reflection and self-organisation, essential for successful dissertation research work. All students have access to the University's central resources for skills development and career planning. Professional body events, such as CIPD and CMI events, enable students to network with the professional community and develop possible career avenues.
6 Supporting the development and recognition of career management skills through work placement or work experience.	The course offers an opportunity for an internship. In addition, as previously described, the sharing of prior experiences of students and the use of guest lecturers and live case studies will provide access, at least in part, to the necessary skills and experience required of HR managers in the contemporary workplace.
7 Supporting the development of skills by recognising that they can be cultivated through extra curricula activities.	Students will be made aware of relevant public industry activities taking place outside the University. This would include seminars, talks and presentations at professional body events, conferences etc. Relevant publications available electronically or through the University library will be highlighted to students. In addition, students will have access to the School's extensive programme of extra-curricular activities that includes the Research Today! seminar series, the opportunity to apply for work in the Business Solutions Centre etc.

8 Supporting the development of skills and attitudes as a basis for continuing professional development.	The course has opportunities for students to participate in all seminars, business talks, symposiums and conferences organised by the School of Business in collaboration with relevant professional bodies, such as the CIPD and the CMI.
9 Other approaches to personal development planning.	To support personal development, all students have access to the university's central learning resources, which provide services relating to Library, IT Support, Skills for Learning, Student Advice, and Employability and Careers.
10 The means by which self-reflection, evaluation and planned development is supported e.g. electronic or paper-based learning log or diary.	Self-reflection is embedded throughout the course both in modules (for example in the 'Creativity, Enterprise and Innovation', 'People Management and Leadership', 'International and Comparative Employment Relations', 'Contemporary Issues in HRM' modules), within the Residential and through the development and execution of the Capstone Business Project.

Appendix C: Terminology

awarding body	a UK higher education provider (typically a university) with the power to award higher education qualifications such as degrees
bursary	a financial award made to students to support their studies; sometimes used interchangeably with 'scholarship'
collaborative provision	a formal arrangement between a degree-awarding body and a partner organisation, allowing for the latter to provide higher education on behalf of the former
compulsory module	a module that students are required to take
contact hours	the time allocated to direct contact between a student and a member of staff through, for example, timetabled lectures, seminars and tutorials
coursework	student work that contributes towards the final result but is not assessed by written examination
current students	students enrolled on a course who have not yet completed their studies or been awarded their qualification
delivery organisation	an organisation that delivers learning opportunities on behalf of a degree-awarding body
distance-learning course	a course of study that does not involve face-to-face contact between students and tutors
extracurricular	activities undertaken by students outside their studies
feedback (on assessment)	advice to students following their completion of a piece of assessed or examined work
formative assessment	a type of assessment designed to help students learn more effectively, to progress in their studies and to prepare for summative assessment; formative assessment does not contribute to the final mark, grade or class of degree awarded to students
higher education provider	organisations that deliver higher education

independent learning	learning that occurs outside the classroom that might include preparation for scheduled sessions, follow-up work, wider reading or practice, completion of assessment tasks, or revision
intensity of study	the time taken to complete a part-time course compared to the equivalent full-time version: for example, half-time study would equate to 0.5 intensity of study
lecture	a presentation or talk on a particular topic; in general lectures involve larger groups of students than seminars and tutorials
learning zone	a flexible student space that supports independent and social learning
material information	information students need to make an informed decision, such as about what and where to study
mode of study	different ways of studying, such as full-time, part-time, e-learning or work-based learning
modular course	a course delivered using modules
module	a self-contained, formally structured unit of study, with a coherent and explicit set of learning outcomes and assessment criteria; some providers use the word 'course' or 'course unit' to refer to individual modules
national teaching fellowship	a national award for individuals who have made an outstanding impact on student learning and the teaching profession
navigability (of websites)	the ease with which users can obtain the information they require from a website
optional module	a module or course unit that students choose to take
performance (examinations)	a type of examination used in performance-based subjects such as drama and music
professional body	an organisation that oversees the activities of a particular profession and represents the interests of its members
prospective student	those applying or considering applying for any programme, at any level and employing any mode of study, with a higher education provider

regulated course	a course that is regulated by a regulatory body
regulatory body	an organisation recognised by government as being responsible for the regulation or approval of a particular range of issues and activities
scholarship	a type of bursary that recognises academic achievement and potential, and which is sometimes used interchangeably with 'bursary'
semester	either of the parts of an academic year that is divided into two for purposes of teaching and assessment (in contrast to division into terms)
seminar	seminars generally involve smaller numbers than lectures and enable students to engage in discussion of a particular topic and/or to explore it in more detail than might be covered in a lecture
summative assessment	formal assessment of students' work, contributing to the final result
term	any of the parts of an academic year that is divided into three or more for purposes of teaching and assessment (in contrast to division into semesters)
total study time	the total time required to study a module, unit or course, including all class contact, independent learning, revision and assessment
tutorial	one-to-one or small group supervision, feedback or detailed discussion on a particular topic or project
work/study placement	a planned period of experience outside the institution (for example in a workplace or at another higher education institution) to help students develop particular skills, knowledge or understanding as part of their course
workload	see 'total study time'
written examination	a question or set of questions relating to a particular area of study to which candidates write answers usually (but not always) under timed conditions
