University

1-3 June 2016 @ London, UK

Call for Papers

The organising committee are pleased to invite you to the International Conference on Banking and Finance in London 2016 which is proudly hosted by School of Business, London South Bank University and co-hosted by Newcastle Business School, Northumbria University and Guildhall Faculty of Business and Law, London Metropolitan University. The Conference aims to provide a platform for academics, research students, policy makers and practitioners to present and discuss major critical banking and finance challenges and issues. Both theoretical and empirical papers are encouraged in areas which include, but are not limited to:

Asset Pricing	Efficiency and productivity analysis	Islamic Banking
Bank Lending	Financial Economics	Mergers and Acquisition
Bank Management	Financial Econometrics	Online/digital banking and online security
Behavioural Finance	Financial Integration	Personal Finance
Contemporary issues in Banking	Financial Markets	Portfolio Management
Corporate Finance	Financial Modelling and Forecasting	Risk Management
Derivatives	Financial Policy and Regulation

Special Issues in International Journal of Financial Studies (IJFS)

Qualified papers presented at the conference will be invited for formal submission to a special issue of the IJFS journal (special issue "Emerging Trends in Banking & Finance"). International Journal of Financial Studies (ISSN 2227-7072) is an international, peer-reviewed, scholarly open access journal on financial markets, instruments, policy, and management research published quarterly online by MDPI (Multidisciplinary Digital Publishing Institute). Papers submitted will undergo the normal journal reviewing procedure and additional details will be communicated within one month after the conference.

Moreover, all submitted full papers will be included in the conference proceedings CD. Two sponsored Best Paper award prizes will be given to the best papers presented at the conference.
